Oklahoma

OKLAHOMA CITY.... June is hot in Oklahoma City—in terms of both the weather and the art happenings around town. During the weekend of June 9-11, you can view paintings and sculpture by the West's best-known artists at the Prix de West Invitational, purchase Native American pots or watch Native dance competitions at the Red Earth Festival, and attend local gallery openings.

With work by more than 100 artists such as Bonita Roberts, Doug Hyde, Gordon Snidow, and Steve Kestrel, Prix de West at the National Cowboy Hall of Fame includes a preview party Friday, June 9; artists' seminars and demonstrations Saturday; and a sale-by-drawing and awards presentation that evening. See pages 100-107 for a preview of several works in the show.

Pottery, paintings, jewelry, and other Native arts are for sale at the Red Earth Festival at the Myriad Convention Center; authentic foods and entertainment round out the event.

In addition, don't miss Dodson Gallery's 17th anniversary show—including artists Patricia Dobson, Curt Walters, Harold Holden, Cyrus Afsary, Gerald Balciar, Sandy Scott, and Gretchen Schmid—as well as works by featured artists Wes Newton, Linda Tuma Robertson, Kim Shaklee, and B.R. Gates at Howell Gallery.

Montana

BOZEMAN.... Some 30 artists meet in Montana this month for Chaparral Fine Art's annual Masters of Montana, a three-day event featuring plein-air painting sessions and a sale. This year's show theme is western waters, and the painters and sculptors work in idyllic settings along the Yellowstone, Gallatin, and Madison rivers. Idaho impressionist painter Robert Moore is the featured artist; others participating include Dix Baines, Vladimir Zavalov, Barbara McKee, Peter Brooke, and Michael Untiedt. The more than 100 works created during the week go on sale Saturday evening, June 24, and a gala reception follows. Works will be on display at the gallery through July 9.
